

HENFIELD'S WAR DEAD

Men and women of Henfield have been called to war many times over the centuries. The last two great wars, World War I and World War II, resulted in the deaths of 77 local men in active service in WW1 and 24 in WW2. They are listed below.

Highlighted are those men whose graves are found in Henfield Cemetery, who are honoured each year during the Remembrance Day ceremonies. Their graves are maintained by the War Graves Commission. If you wish to find out more about these servicemen, please see the document "Servicemen buried in the Cemetery".

Those of you who may wish to visit the cemetery will also find inscriptions on a few family memorials to servicemen who died and are actually buried overseas.
